The rooms are very well distributed, with a very bright living area overlooking the Cana Grde and a functional and wide xona night.

Location

The lively Cannaregio district is known for the 16th century Jewish ghetto. Strada Nova is a famous local shopping street, while the secondary streets are a destination for lovers of crafts and vintage products. The Cannaregio district, north-western part of Venice, extends from the Grand Canal to the Lagoon. It is a part of the city still densely populated today. The district is historically divided into two parts. An older one overlooking the Grand Canal with its buildings, and the other more recent (especially the '600-'700) more popular.
